

The Music of

Sharon Howarth-Russell

Sharon Howarth-Russell was born in Toronto, Canada

into a musical family. She began studying the piano at the age of four and turned music into her career as a performer, entertainer, composer, teacher and researcher.

In 1978, Sharon witnessed a miracle. A member of her show band cured himself of cancer through holistic health methods. Since that time, she has been researching and composing music to further the field of health and healing through alternative holistic methods.

Sharon has a wealth of knowledge about how colour and sound react with the body as well as how rhythm patterns can affect the way we feel. Dr. Patricia Kerr, H.U.M.D.C. - who taught and researched ways to help people reduce distress through holistic methods, encouraged Sharon to use her knowledge of colour, sound, and rhythm to enhance healing techniques through alternative methods. Since then, Sharon has composed several pieces of innovative and inspirational music to ease the discomfort of stress and dis-ease.

In 1987, Sharon created and developed the 'I Love Music' program for people of all ages from four years old and up. This program incorporates the basics of music with many integrative learning techniques and ideas. This unique program is fun and easy and helps children and adults develop their creative potential, as well as their skills in playing the piano. At this time, she also wrote the music and appeared on a children's show called "Pollywog" for C.F.T.O.

In 1989, Sharon's healing music was researched by Dr. Sharon Kopinak, a wonderful vet, who found the music helped animals in many different areas.

In 1990, The National Research of Canada supported a six-month intensive research project with Brock University in the Cognitive Research Laboratory to study the effects of her music with the elderly, brain injured, students with learning difficulties and university students.

1990 -2008 - Sharon taught in a private school where she implemented her musical and holistic ideas along with her CD's to enhance the learning and healing process, as well as giving seminars. Today, she continues to teach, writes music and personal healing music from her home and gives seminars.

*The Results of Infinite Joy and Infinite Mind
in Our Learning Process:*

Infinite Joy has been researched at Brock University through the Cognitive Research Laboratory in a very thorough 6-month study using the elderly, head-injured, University students & school aged children. The results definitely showed that in the elderly, head-injured and in children, there was a remarkable improvement in cognition activities (i.e. focus, attention and concentration). The results for Infinite Mind showed that in the elderly, head-injured and students, there was a remarkable improvement in the Memory activities (i.e. Implicit Memory - unaware retrieval and Explicit Memory- deliberate recollection.) The head-injured response became predictable in every case. The EEG showed an increase in specific brain wave activity, (while this music was playing, before and after learning), which did not show up using other music. These changes in the brain wave patterns are not only due to learning but they also reflect changes in the EEG as a function of the interaction between learning & listening to Infinite Joy.

How and Why Infinite Joy Works:

When Infinite Joy is being played, our beta and 4th stage delta brain waves are equally activated. This activation continues for nearly 12 hours after. According to the neurologist's research, in 4th stage delta, protein is assimilated which helps the learning take place. If we are over 50 (depending on our biological clock), stressed or in ill health, the tendency is not to move into that 4th stage delta sleep. The results are forgetfulness, feeling overwhelmed and stressed out, difficulty on focusing on the task at hand, and a slowness to heal.

When Infinite Joy, in the waking or sleeping process, is being played, both patterns of beta (our conscious mind) and 4th stage delta (our deepest sleep) are being equally activated which results in focusing and concentrating, as well as healing.
